

Between the quarry and other areas on site being revegetated with native plants, we have over a hectare of native reclamation work happening. The quarry walls are looking great in areas with plantings already done, but there are still have thousands of plants to go in over the coming months and years. Other revegetation areas at the Garden are being replanted with a range of grasses and smaller shrubs. We raise many of these plants, but many are also purchased at various stages of maturity.
